ACTION FOR LIBEL AGAINST THE TIMES. LONDON, 4th July, 1888.

Mr O'Donnell has brought an action for libel against the Times. Sir R. E. Webster contended and applied that the Parnellite party should read the letters signed by Mr Parnell, showing its connection with the Fenian leaders and also Byrne's acknowledgement of Parnell's cheque shortly after the murder of Lord Cavendish.

> Mn W. Jupp, Manager of the Telegraph Companies, received the following telegram from Singapore with regard to the Java-Australia cables of the E. E. A. & C. Telegraph Company :--

During the interruption of the Jaya-Australia Telegraph Cables every opportunity will be taken to forward messages to Australia by mail, and in addition the Company has chartered a special steamer to run between Banjoewangie (Java) and Port Darwin, which left Banjoowangie last night with the first packet of telegrams. The Company's repairing ship Recorder is now on the position of both breaks, which are in the same place, and are believed to be, as occurred once before, caused by Volcanic Agency. Defendant appeared confused but made no reply. Witness searched defendant's person and found four notes of the Chartered Bank for $100 each, besides some papers. From inquiries witness found that defendant used to be a shroff in the employ of the China Mer chants Steam Navigation Company. To the best of witness's knowledge defendant was at present unemployed. His Worship remanded the case in order that further inquiries might be made.

THE question of recompensing Chinese emigrants for the pecuniary loss they have sustained in being prevented from landing

in Australia looked as if it had assumed a somewhat dangerous aspect in Hougkong this wook. A body of emigrants who had taken passage on the s. s. Changsha for the Southern continent, and who, not being allowed to disembark there, had to be brought back to this Colony, seemed the other day as if they made up their minds to do something desperate in order to recover their passage money. It was not unnatural that these disappointed pilgrims, finding themselves minus their £13 each and 'no for'arder' should feel indignant; and it would perhaps be too much to expect of them-ignorant and childish as they are -that they would choose a rational mode of seeking a remedy for the grievance which they undoubtedly have. What they did, however, was to march in a CHAN Pat Kwai, a coolie, who had been crowd to the offices of the shipping agents employed to carry rations to the battery at | and demand the return of their passage Hung Nam, was brought before Mr Wode- money forthwith. Accomping to the Journal des Débats of the 5th June alarming reports are current respecting the bill of health of the mail steamor Cantun, from Tong-King, which has been detained in quarantine at Algiers for the past five days.

THE Centon Times has the following paragraph with reference to the cause of the fatal accident that occurred on board the Clan Mackintosh, where live men died from suffocation :- As was at first thought, the cause appears to be the result of decaying vegetable matter. Mr Ballard, of the Apothecaries' Co., was, as an expert, called in to investigate the cause of the accumulation of the foul air which proved so fatal to the unfortunate men who entered the atore-room. He discovered the store-room-which is very small, being about 16 feet squarecharged with a mixture of carbonic acid gas and sulphurated hydrogen, the latter in considerable volume. This mixture, as is well known, is of a most deadly nature. There is no doubt that the fodder for the horse on board, among which was some dhall in a damp condition, acted on by the terrific heat experienced in the Red Sea, was the cause of the generation of at least one of the gasses and that this was still further aggravated by the application of the disinfectant, and further that the feet of the store being so confined in area and entirely closed up after the disinfecting-fluid had been thrown down conserving the fatal fumes, made the more entry into the room fatal to human life.

THE following items of late home news are from Australian papers :--

The new Emperor, who has taken the title of William the Second, in addressing the army, said that he and the army were born for each other.

His proclamation to the people of the Empire is completely colourless and indicates nothing worthy of note. Austria strongly resents any interference in the Bulgarian question. Count Kalnoky, the Austrian Prime Minister, considers that the European "situation is greatly improved, and agrees with the British policy respecting the Bulgarian hone of contention. The Imperial Government is carefully considering the Chinese Bill. A party of three hundred members of Parliament, on the invitation of Lord Charles Beresford, inspected the fortifications and naval arsonals. Several ships were found to be entirely without armaments, while many of the arms of all sizes were found to be of obsolete patterns. The Chinese residents are protesting against the bill drafted by the Conference. and have decided to appeal to the Emperor

SIR J. P. Hennessy's Action against 'The Times.'-In the High Court of Justice on the let inst., before Mr Justice Manisty and Mr Justice Stephen, this matterwhich had been previously before the Court-came on upon an interlocutary application. The plaintiff was Sir John Pope Hennessy, Governor of the Mauritius, and the defendant was the printer and publisher of The Times. The action was to recover damages for alleged libels, which the plaintiff's counsel said imputed that the plaintiff had tampered with a report sent home of speeches delivered in a debate in the Council of the Government of the Mauritius by political opponents of the Governor, and in which his policy was severely attacked and criticised. The plaintiff exhibited to the defendant a number of interrogatories, principally in reference to the ersons from whom the alleged libels come, and as to the communications which had been made to the paper. Some knowers were made to the interrogatories, but the plaintiff not being satisfied with them applied to the Master for an order for further and better answers, and this application was refused or was referred by the Master to a judge. It consequently came before Mr Justice Denman, who refused to make the order asked for, and this decision now came before their lordships upon appeal. Mr Caguey (with him Mr Lockwood, Q. C.) was for the plaintiff, and Mr Lumley Smith, Q. C., and Mr Graham were for the defendants. Mr Justice Manisty said that in his opinion Mr Justice Denman had come to a right conclusion. The action was founded upon three alleged libels, composed partly of statements of fact and partly of comments upon these facts. The substance of the defence was that the statements of fact were true, and that the comments were fair and reasonable comments upon the facts. In his judgment the interrogatories had been sufficiently answered, the questions in the cause being what they were. It would be going too far to compel a defendant to disclose to the plaintiff his whole case.—Appeal dismissed.

'FRAGRANT WATERS' MURMUR

That the 'acheme' for the extension of the Praya-the more than probable aggrandisement of Marine Lot-holders-and the perhaps extremely remote benefit of ratepayers in general, seems for the moment almost to tremble in the balance, and apnears as if any slight movement might induce the beam to kick either way.

That the promoters have now less 'the courage of their opinions ' than when they first sought to tickle the nose of the public with a philanthropic (1) work of great pecuniary promise, to themselves.

That the voice of the charmer, while it has succeeded with most of the marine lotholders, has had no effect upon the general public, save to enable them to see through the 'scheme.'

That the Government is evidently making ready for a change of front should further instructions from the Colonial Office indicate the advisability of a double • somersault backwards

That the object is of sufficient importance to receive some little attention even at the bands of the Colonial Office, and that in spite of whatever pressure may b brought to bear, the scheme will not be sanctioned entirely without some deliberation.

That indeed those of us who do not wish to see the undertaking fall into private hands may console ourselves with the reflection that the traditions of the Colonial Office will not be departed from, and that in this as mall other cases the Colonial Office will prove itself consistently obstructive-oven if, as appears tolerably certain, the scheme is not opposed on its own merits, or demerits.

THE PRAYA RECLAMATION SCHEME. To the Editor of the 'CHINA MAIL.'

Hongkong, 7th July, 1888. SIR, -- The more that this scheme is considered the clearer does it become that the Government would commit a very grievous mistake in handing over the foreshore, the property of the Colony, to a number of marine lot-holders to reclaim it for their own personal advantage. I am not one of those who favour the Government undertaking railways, providing public libraries, and generally caring for the Colony in a grandmotherly sort of way, but there is one thing that they are in duty bound to do and that is to manage and husband the land of the Colony, which belongs to the Colony and which is intrusted to them as stewards. Supposing, therefore, that the advantages to be obtained by the Colony from the Marino lot-holders unde taking this the Opium Farm, no excuse can be scheme were ten times greater than they are and the risks attending the Government should say it ought still to be a very serious | Oriental Steam Navigation Company was matter for consideration, whether the Gov- | held at the company's offices, 122, Leadenernment were justified in handing over the | hall-street, London, on the 5th ult. The superiority of Indian is bring Indian opium to the price of native, not even if China handicaps home-grown opium by imposing upon it heavier duties than it now pays. India, no doubt, can for years produce opium of better quality, but its relative superiority tends to grow less each year. The serious point looks to me to be that quality seems to be getting to count for less and price for more in the competition. At the present moment, supposing all the duty and lekin now paid on Indian opium to be remirved and placed on native opium, in addition to what it already bears, Honan opium-nearly as good as Patna—could be bought here for at least Tls. 40 a picul under the price of the latter. BOUM-BOUM.

(Translated from the French of Jules Claretic for the New York Times. There lay the child as pale as death his narrow, white bed His eyes expanded by fever, looked straight ahead, with that strange, fixed stare of the sick who already see things the living ignore. At the foot of the bed sat the mother, following anxionaly the progress of illness on the emaciated face of the boy and biting her fingers to repress her sets. The father, an honest workman, was keeping back the tears that hung scalding on his reddened evelids.

Day was breaking, sweet and clear, on that pleasant spring morning, and the light was stealing into the narrow room in the Rue des Abbesses, where little Francois, the child of Jacques Legrand and Madcleine, his wife, lay dying.

He was only seven. White, rosy and happy; quick an d gay as a sparrow-poor. little fellow-only three weeks before. then he caught the fever, and one afternoon they brought him home from school, his head aching and his little hands feverish. Since then he had been in bed, and delirious at times, and saying such out-of-the-way things. There were his shoes. His mother hadeput them on a shelf in a corner. Sometimes he would say, 'Throw them away. Little Francois never will want his shoes Francois never will put them on. ·Francois never will go to school again-never, never.' Then the boy's father would say, 'Wil •jou keep stiff!' and the mother, pale and wasted, would hide her head in the pillow so that Brancois might not hear her crying. That night the child was no longer out of mind, but the Doctor was much worried, because for the last two days the boy had ahown a strange depression, just as if, at seven years of age, he were already tired of life. Francois seemed so listless, and would let his head droop. He refused all food, The smile on his poor thin lips had fled. The eyes were haggard, and still there was that sad look, that sought something far, far away-what?

'Something up there, perhaps!' thought the mother, as she trembled. He refused his tea, his broth, his sirup | Jacques Legrand cried out gleefully : and water. He would take nothing.

will have Boum-Boum! The mother seized the hand of Jacques with a nervous grip.

What can he mean, Jacques? Oh, he is lost—lost : On the father's face there was visible the faintest relaxation of the muscles. It was like a fleeting smile of hope when a man condemned to death imagines there is the possibility of a reprieve.

Boum-Boum! He remembered on Easter he had taken Francois to the circus. In his ear there still rang the hearty laugh of the boy, the scream of amusement when the clown, that beautiful clown, all bespangled, with a huge butterfly painted on his back of motley, had thrown a somersault, then tripped up the ringmaster, then had his head in the sawdust, his feet in the air, or next was kicking soft felt hats up to the very chandelier and catching them on his head again, where they formed a pyramid. How, after every funny sally, like a refrain that made his funny face light up, that clown had shouted Boum-Boum! the orchestra accompanying him with a grand crash. Boum-Boum!' and every time the Boum-Boum' came in the whole circus would roar with applause, and then would follow the clear, pearly-rippling laughter of his own little Francois. Bonm-Boum! Could it have been that 'Boum-Boum?' Was it the clown Francois wanted to hear, to see again? How could he go to the circus, and the poor child stretched there.

dying in his bed / Impossible! That night Jacques Legrand brought the child a jointed clown, brilliant with flash of spangles. He had paid a big price for it in a toy shop. It cost about as much as his wages in the machine shop would come to for four whole days. Had it cost him his work for a week, a month, the live-long year, he would not have cared, if it only would bring back a smile again on the parched lips of his ill child.

The boy looked for a moment at the plaything, as it lay glittering on the white sheets, and then said sadly : . That is not Boum Boum. I want

And the child drank. 'It was awful nice, wasn't it!' 'Very nice. Thank you, Boum-Boum.' ' Doctor,' said the clown to the physician, no jealousy, I trust; but it seems to me that the ugly faces I make for him do him quite as much good as your prescription.'

Father and mother were crying, but this time it was for joy. From that time until François was running around, there drove up every day a carriage to the house in the Rue des Abbesses. A man came out wrapped in an overcoat, with a high-standing collar, and under all that was the clown, with his painted face. 'What do I owe you, sir,' Jacques Legrand asked of the clown when François went out for the first time, for I certainly owe you something. The clown held out his hands of Hercules to the parents. . 'We will shake hands, that Then the clown gave François a good kiss, and said, with a laugh: 'Well, there is one thing you might do.
